

Health Safety and Environment Division Citations

The Health, Safety and Environment Division of the Royal Australian Chemical Institute shall have an award entitled: "The Health Safety and Environment Division Citation". Up to three citations may be awarded in each calendar year and, where possible, shall be presented at a National Meeting of the Division.

Citations shall be awarded in recognition of a significant contribution to the area of Health Safety and Environment.

Citations shall normally be awarded to permanent resident(s) of Australia.

Nominees need to be RACI members.

The recipient(s) may be invited to present a paper either to a National Meeting of the Division or, if that is not possible, to a specially designated meeting in the State or Territory of residence of the recipient.

Submissions may be made by self-nomination, by nomination by one/two member(s) of the HSE Division, or by invitation of the Standing Committee of the Division.

Normally the closing date for nominations is 6 months before a Divisional conference and should be addressed to the Divisional Chair.

Nominations for a citation can be made by using the attached nomination/application form.

The Standing committee of the Division shall appoint a sub-committee of five members (with power to co-opt), including the Chairperson of Division, to consider applications and to recommend to the Standing Committee. The Chairperson of Division shall be, ex officio, the Chairperson of the sub-committee.

The sub-committee shall consider applications on the basis of some or all of the following:

- Contribution to HSE through teaching, research and industry engagement.
- Contributions by an individual to promote HSE principles
- Contributions to the general community and industry general community.
- The development of HSE solutions, industry based training solutions
- Service to the Health Safety and Environment Division of the Royal Australian Chemical Institute.

Nominations should be made to the Chair of the Health, Safety and Environment Division by 30th June using the attached application form.
